Edgar O. Spaulding's Account of His Return Camping Trip from Florida—Mr. Spaulding is in Harrison for the Summer.

This is intended to be a sort of sequel to what has been written before and as it is a sequel, it will be a continuation of the story of a trip back from Florida by a motor camper.

When I was a boy in school, my grammar teacher called it English now, teacher, but we were never to begin a letter or an article with "I" or "we", but using "he" or "she" or "it" or "they". I have observed, I can use the word "I" all I am amint to and "get away with it". It is very hard for me to write in the third person and besides, I believe that an article of this kind is much more interesting to the reader if written as a personal story, than otherwise.

After stopping several times that they were just out of reach, which probably explains why they were still there. After a time, we did succeed in getting three or four with the end of a long pole.

Fort Myers, Fla. is a small city of about 6500 with possibly 3000 more than that during the winter season. It is the most tropical city in the United States. The strange and luxuriant vegetation is very interesting. Royal and cocoanut palms line the streets and the yards facing the street, at this time, a mass of flowers and peculiar vegetation, a great deal of it very new to us.

Here also, are the winter homes of Thos. A. Edison and Henry Ford. Thos. A. Edison is the "King of Fort Myers". The Chamber of Commerce advertises the winter home and the daily papers mention him every day, one of them print a quotation of his regarding Fort Myers as a headline to every edition.

Edison lives in an unpretentious white frame house that would be just ordinary here in the North. The grounds surrounding the house are very large and contain one solid mass of tropical trees and foliage; so thick as to be almost impenetrable except by the regular pathways. A picket fence surrounds the front which, by the way, is characteristic of the "City of Palms."

While walking on this street, a coconut dropped from a tree within two feet of us. This, we kept for a souvenir, and have since been in falling, but people on the head with more or less serious results. To go back a bit, we make ourselves comfortable at the city camp grounds and have supper when to round out the usual program, at a new camp ground it rained. It was very hot, the rain not making much difference, we sleep with the tent front with (open all night) except for the screen with no lid at all.

Like all the tropics, there were plenty of mosquitoes and insects, literally clouds of them. There was also a little black fellow that could hardly be seen, but who could take a regular size bite and did. It is impossible even with screens to avoid all the insects and we were all pretty well marked up before the end of the week. Florence most of all. Phyllis thought they played a bit rough.

April 7th. The Elks were holding their State convention and we got down town to see the parade, etc. This was the biggest thing that Fort Myers ever had and they were very proud. The parade was some two miles long, with 40 beautiful floats and a dozen bands. The city was crowded with people. During the parade a shower came up and it rained hard for ten minutes with the sun shining all the while. The sixty piece band from West Palm Beach played more or less appropriately: "If Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo. do" with a big drum, the thermometer hitting 95 degrees in the shade.

That night we had our first experience with a real honest to goodness tropical thunder shower. It rained between four and five inches in two hours and the wind blew a gale. When we retired, it was a perfect moonlight night and in the morning we neglected to fasten the front flap. The wind woke us up and it took both of us to fasten the door, we were wet through by the time it was done. The water came down in sheets and did not stop and the ground being so flat it couldn't run off, it had to stay where it fell. Our tents did not leak even in this storm, but we did not keep the water from coming in through the floor there was so much of it. We slept the rest of the night with our beds in a miniature lake. "Ain't nature wonderful," especially when camping out.

The less said about the drinking water of Fort Myers, the better. I believe most every motor camper who is in it. You could not cook with it or make coffee even boiling did no good. We gave it up and bought distilled water at sixty cents for five gallons.

We spent one day on the beach at Punta Rassa which is on the Gulf of Mexico, twenty miles south of Fort Myers. Here we photographed the cocoanuts and palm trees and went swimming. Altogether a delightful day. Painted on the wall by the door of a fisherman's place of business, we find this bit of pertinent philosophy:

"To trust is to hurt.
To hurt is to hell.
No trust, no hurt, no hell."

April 10th we break camp and move on to Tampa. At the start we got on the wrong road and so went miles out of our way, but not without some compensation. We stopped in the yard of a farm house to seek directions and also got some grapefruit, which we noticed were being picked there. Mr. Farmer would not sell us any fruit as he said it was not allowed, but said we could pick up all we wanted from the ground where the fruit fell from the trees. We took all we could carry, they being the sweetest and best that we had while in Florida. On leaving, we remarked upon its "Yee" "Yee" "Yee" the farmer said, "It is hot; but I have seen it better." No doubt.

It is a fine ride up the coast with excellent roads some of it time and detours the rest. We pass through the fishing village of Punta Gorda, a fine little town, through Venice, that mammoth development that may be done in twenty years if the money holds out, through Sarasota, that the Ringling Bros. of circus fame are booming, through Bradenton, with its immense vegetable gardens, crossed the long bridge at Palmetto, then on a perfect road to Tampa.

We hire a cottage at DeCoto Park camp and stop over Sunday. For once it did not rain though it thundered and lightened something fierce. This camp is located on the bay near DeSoto Park and is very large. It has its own bathing beach as well as good boating and fishing. Most of the campers go fishing on Sunday. There are scores of small houses that rent at one dollar per night or four dollars per week. It is nearly a complete city in itself, having two bakeries, cigar and candy store, barber shop, tailor shop, restaurant, grocery, garage, souvenir shop etc. (Close by is Fishers' Camp nearly as large).

This part of the city is called East Tampa, and the population seems to be largely Greek. Nearby is Ybor City, the famous foreign colony, also a part of Tampa. Here on Seventh Avenue, are dozens of queer looking shops, where you can buy anything you ever heard of, and something besides. And bananas, the street seemed to be lined with them. They were hanging outside by the sidewalk and inside by the counters, not one or two bunches, but hundreds of them. And the price of these nice large bananas was sixty-five to seventy-five cents a bunch.

Tampa boasts of something more than a hundred thousand population, estimated to be double that in winter. It is rather more of a manufacturing city than is generally found in the South, having five hundred industries, of which over one hundred and fifty are cigar factories, with an output of one and one-half million per day. The streets are very crowded and give one the impression of a much larger place. There are many parks and playgrounds and as you get away from the crowded part, many fine and beautiful homes. There is also a municipal tourist camp on Seventh Avenue, that is good and clean with all conveniences, but I did not find out about this till after wards.

Monday, April 12th, we move on to St. Petersburg and Lewis Tent City, via of Gandy Bridge. This bridge is one of the engineering wonders of the world, costing $2,500,000 to build, is 26,000 feet long, wide enough for four cars abreast, ten feet above the water at high tide, the water throughout its length averaging ten feet in depth. Its longest length is six miles, but the speedometer on our car, said five and three quarters from gate post to gate post. A special system of electric lights flood the bridge with light at night. The toll is fifty cents for car and driver and five cents for each additional passenger. There is plenty of traffic in both directions all the time. No tourist to Florida should miss the trip to St. Petersburg via Gandy Bridge.

Leaving the bridge, we are on a wonderful wide boulevard, and in a short time we come to St. Petersburg proper, that much advertised "City of Sunshine", the tourists delight and the automobilists paradise with its wide streets, a city of tourists, by tourists, and for tourists.

And did the sun shine for us? O, yes, indeed, it did then.

"Lewis Tent City" is just one block from the Big Bayou post office and is a nice, clean, well managed auto camp. Trolley cars pass the gate with a five cent fare to the city so that it is unnecessary to use your auto for city travel if you do not wish to. This is a decided advantage for many campers. This camp has the best system of water piping I have ever seen on any camping ground, no camper being over twenty steps from the water supply. They also have regular mail service by carrier from the Big Bayou post office. Stores and all kind of goods are just outside the gate not forgetting the real estate man.

OUR SPECIAL ATTORNEY ARRIVES

Mr. Fred W. Gaston of Passaic, N. J., our special attorney and fishing companion, called last Wednesday. He went over our case carefully, taking notes and making suggestions regarding our recent entanglement with the fish and game laws. Somehow he seemed pleased over our getting pinched. Mr. Gaston was accompanied by Mrs. Gaston and son Robert. They are stopping at Poland Springs, playing golf, drinking water and burning gasoline.

Pilgrimage of Maine Boys and Girls

Oxford County Boys and Girls Who Will Visit Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass.

The question as to who will represent the various counties in Maine on the pilgrimage of 150 boys and girls from the rural sections who are to spend a week on the grounds of the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield, Mass., in September, has been definitely settled. The State Chamber of Commerce and Agricultural League, by whom the pilgrimage is being sponsored, has received from State Club Leader, Lester H. Shibles, a list of the boys and girls eligible for the trip.

When the project was first under consideration the general committee in charge of plans decided to limit the participation in the pilgrimage to members of the Agricultural and Home Making Clubs in Maine, who represent one of the important features of the extension service of the College of Agriculture. It was specifically stipulated that although the selection should be made on the basis of 1925 club work, every member to be eligible to the Springfield trip must be carrying in a satisfactory manner, Sept. 1 of this year, an approved state certificate as vouchered for by the county extension agents.

These 150 boys and girls and their chaperones will be given free transportation from their homes to Springfield and return, and a week's board on the Exposition grounds, with all of the privileges that are bestowed by the management at what is known as Camp Ball. They will go to Springfield by motor or train, leaving Portland Saturday morning, Sept. 13, and returning leave Springfield Saturday morning, Sept. 25.

Maj. E. E. Philbrook, surveyor of the port of Portland, and one of the directors of the Eastern States Exposition, will go to Springfield several days before the pilgrimage, to assist in making ready the camp for the reception of the Maine delegation.

It is estimated that the cost of the pilgrimage will exceed $3,000. This amount is being raised by the State Chamber of Commerce. Many donations have been received from granges, service clubs, chambers of commerce, business and professional women's clubs and other organizations that have at heart the welfare of the youth in Maine's agricultural communities.

The general committee in charge of the plans comprises representatives of various state-wide organizations. George F. West, vice-president of the State Chamber of Commerce, is chairman. William G. Hutton, industrial agent of the Maine Central Railroad, treasurer; A. L. T. Cummings of the State Chamber of Commerce, secretary.

Following is a list of the boys and girls chosen by merit of their club work to represent Oxford county on the trip:

Boys: Ralph Davis, South Paris; Lewis Knight, Norway; Vernon Knight, Norway; Merion Parsons, South Paris; Lewis F. Richardson, Norway; C. Henry Sweet, South Paris; Alternates: Alfred Fournier, Rumford; Melvin White, Norway.

Girls: Thelma Adams, Hiram; Marion Braden, Rumford; Adelaide M. Emery, Woodstock; Rita Knight, South Paris; Louise Knight, Norway; Lavinia Powers, South Paris; Alternates: Margaret Adams, Hiram; Bessie Corbett, South Paris.

Make Old Clothes Look New

One of a Series of Articles on Clothing

"Every time you meet one of the Kornworthys they look as if they had just come out of a store, they are always so fresh and neat and clean. I don't see how they manage to look so well, just as if they were new children and they do not have a very large income." This was a common remark about this family and knowing them as I did I could easily explain the situation.

Mrs. Kornworthy was a worker. She did her work, the sewing for the family, was president of a club and interested in all church activities. She was the one who gave this neat and fresh appearance to the whole family. She had three sisters who did not have returned to her, helped her by sending her clothes that they could no longer use. Many women would have picked out what could be worn without any change and sent the rest away. Not so with Mrs. Kornworthy. She would go over things sent to her and find all kinds of possibilities for the different members of the family.

She realized that it did not pay to make over poor garments for herself, but if there were any that needed only slight alterations she would use them. These that were poor in places she would make over for the children. She would rip the garment, brush it and remove the spots. Then was a sponge or cleanser the material and often dye it. Then it would be ready to wear. Many times the cloth could be turned to the wrong side advantageously.

Not only did she use her sister's clothing but some of her own and the father's clothing proved equally as satisfactory.

The materials in father's clothing were strong and good. The coats, trousers, or shirts are apt to be worn in places but there will be material enough for smaller garments. John has a sweater, leggings and cap made from an old sweater of his father's. Pauline had a dress made from a one piece dress of her mother's. A corduroy coat and cap worn by Gertrude was made from her aunt's coat and the coats of two of the younger boys were made from father's and the older brother's.

Some of the suggestions of how old garments may be used are as follows:

Men's Garments

Coat—dress for little girl, coat for boy.

Shirt—rompers, dress for girl, shirt for boy.

Trousers—coat for a boy or girl, trousers for a boy, a little boy's suit.

Overcoats—smaller coats.

Hosiery—to mend other hose, to reflect stockings, child's stockings.

Sweater—child's sweater; hand knitted ones can be unravelled or reknit into stockings or sweaters. If faded, they can be redyed.

Women's Clothing

Suits—two piece or three piece suits can be combined into one garment for a younger girl, or suit for a boy.

Skirts—aprons, dresses, blouses.

Waists—children's underwear.

Coats—smaller coats.

Underwear—children's underwear and nightgowns.

It is necessary to take great care in selecting clothes that may be made over and ways of making them over. One must be sure that the material itself, merits the labor to be spent on it. If dressmaker has to be employed the expense will often be as much as new clothing. While remodeling clothes may sound purely economical, for the ingenious person it is really an interesting process.

Mrs. Kornworthy had the ability to plan and skill in doing the work so for her it was a change from her daily work and it gave her the satisfaction that one gets from doing something worth while.

Remodeling is worthwhile when material still has wearing quality and can be freshened so that it will look well made into a garment suited to the wearer and the use for which it is intended, only then is it to be remodeled.

The Rabbit Industry

Profit in Raising Rabbits, Meat and Fur in Demand

The rabbit industry in the United States is a comparatively young one. Figuratively speaking, we might say it has passed from the infancy stage and is now in its adolescence. At present it is growing rapidly and bids fair to hold one of the highest positions in the near future, among its contemporaries in the fur and animal industries. As one breeder has said, the rabbit business is a good "business for the man who knows how. As in any other trade or profession, the man who goes at it in a haphazard way, without habits of his charges, cannot hope to have the best success. There is a right and wrong way to this as in everything else.

Many people labor under the delusion that every breeder who advertises rabbits is trying to sell them a "gold brick." Whereas, if they knew the facts they would find them all wrong. "Well," the skeptic might say, "What are the facts?" I'll endeavor to give a few of the most important ones.

In the first place, what is the use of rabbits anyway? Why should we spend our time raising them? Rabbits have a double value, meat and fur. If you will look at the following table of relative food values of the different meats, you will find that rabbit meat leads the list.

Beef, net nutriment.....55%
Mutton.....65%
Pork.....75%
Chicken.....80%
Rabbit.....83%
Go into some of our large hotels and ask the chef. You may get it, but the chances are that you will get rabbit instead because rabbit meat is cheaper and it so closely resembles chicken in looks and flavor that few can tell the difference. Many farmers are raising rabbits to solve their meat problems, because it can be raised so much more cheaply than other meats. People in the cities, who are wise to this fact and who have a back yard or stable, are keeping a few rabbits and thus cutting down their living expenses and at the same time getting more or less revenue from the sale of surplus stock. Rabbits sell in the market for from 25 to 50 cents per pound, while the estimated cost of raising them is from three to five cents per pound, depending on whether you raise your food for them or buy it all.

Now let us go down to the apparel shop and look at some fur coats for sale. Just look at that one over in the corner! Isn't it a beauty? We'll go over and have a look at the tag. It says Hudson Seal. Do you know what that means? Why, of course you do. It means that the fur came from seals caught in Hudson Bay or something like that. Nothing of the sort. That name is just one of the fur trade's lovely means of camouflage. Those furs once caught in Hudson Bay or something like that, but who would pay such a high price for a coat made of mere rabbit fur if they knew? The furrier realizes the psychology of this and he knows, the Dirigo Rabbitry of Weeks Mills, they would undoubtedly be glad to furnish any desired information to prospective buyers.

How shall we seek to receive abundant fur?—John 15:7.

A Trip to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pike and son, Junior, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Holborn and Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe left Lynnhville, Monday morning at eight-thirty for Bethel, where they got a few minutes' rest. From there they went to Newry, Stratton, York, Errol, Umbagog Lake, Colebrook and the Balsams at Dixville Notch where they ate dinner.

From there they went across to Canaan, Beecher Falls to the U. S. Customs, Fort-Cook, over the bootlegger's route to Cowshire and Lennoxville, where they camped for the night. It was the Willow Nest camping grounds on the Massachusetts river.

In the evening they went over the city of Sherbrooke in Mr. Holborn's car, leaving there at the camp grounds.

Sherbrooke is about the size of Portland, but a much prettier place. That night there was a heavy thunder shower, the tent leaked and they all got a little wet. On the camp grounds there is a wood shed with a stone wallable roof.

There were also two bathrooms and a good place to swim. After breakfast next morning

They sent cards from there. Then to Granby, Abbotstown, St. Cécile, St. Ample, Marionville and Richelieu, where they had lunch. After the lunch, they went to Richelieu on the Richelieu river. This is over two hundred years old.

In the fort they saw the Dugongan, cemetery, magazine and tower. They took pictures from the tower. After lunch they rested around all the wished they went on to Chambly, St. Hubert, Longueville and across the St. Lawrence river, over the Victoria Jubilee bridge, which is one and one-half miles long. They took a one-half hour trip to the city of Montreal. They camped for the night at Victoria Camping Grounds, Montreal. The ground had all the conveniences that Willow Nest had. After supper, they went to the theatre.

After breakfast next morning they crossed Jubilee bridge again to Lambert, St. Philippe and Napierville, where they had lunch, then on to L'Assommoir, where they had lunch. They found this would be a good place to camp so they went up the bank of the Richelieu canal and camped about one mile from St. Johns. After supper they looked around St. Johns. They saw the military barracks. They went to the yacht club to the dance. Next morning, after breakfast, they went back to Montreal in Mr. Holston's car to tour the city.

With a guide. They saw all the places of interest, including the fort of Beauport, Montreal, Ste. Anne, Lachine Rapids, McGill University, Windsor Station and head offices and Notre Dame Cathedral. This was the most beautiful sight the writer ever saw. Some of the old buildings and paintings and carvings one could imagine. They also saw the basin of holy water where they all bathed their heads and all of these things were shown under aw St. James Cathedral, Roy-

Hospital, Cartier monument

and Chinatown. The Catholics certainly do wonderful work. Montreal has a population of one million, and the great majority of them are Catholics. The houses here are nearly all stone or brick, very pretty. There are very few wooden houses. They are also very old.

After lunch, the men visited the stock yards. That afternoon they butchered twelve hundred hogs and four hundred calves. Each one of the men has a chain without stopping until they reached the cooler. From here they went back to their old camping grounds in St. Johns. After supper they went to the city square. Next morning after breakfast they left for Rouse's Point, N. Y., then to Albany, U. S. Customs, where the men were searched, then they went on again as most of our things were on the ground, and crossed Lake Champlain on the ferry, to Swanton, across Niagara river to St. Albans. From there they went on to Milton, where they had the time of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Hobson and Mr. and Mrs. Pike went up in an aeroplane at a rate of one hundred miles an hour. The writer is just waiting for the time when she can go for a long ride in one. From there they went to Niagara Falls, Buffalo, N. Y., Genesee, Jefferson, Johnson,

Lesson for August 29

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DUTIES TO MAN

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Commandments About Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Serve Man.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Ideal Human Relationships.

1. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12).

1. How this commandment may be broken.

(1) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents—

(a) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman."

(b) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(2) By disobedience.

(3) By not supporting them in their old age.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(1) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3).

(2) "That thou mayest live long upon the earth."

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 13).

This is a bulwark thrown around human life. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

1. By sinning against (Matt. 5:22).

2. By hatred (1 John. 3:15).

3. By immediate recreation.

4. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees.

5. By sending children to toll in shops and factories before maturity.

6. By suicide.

7. By infanticide.

8. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14).

This is a bulwark thrown around the home. This commandment may be broken:

1. By unclean thoughts, affections, purposes and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19).

2. By unchaste conversation.

3. By wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; II Peter 2:14).

4. By immodest apparel.

5. By actual adultery.

6. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15).

This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. This commandment may be broken:

1. By taking that which actually belongs to another.

2. By false weights and measures.

3. By extortion.

4. By employers defrauding employees and the employee failing to do honest work or put in full time.

5. By borrowing and not returning.

6. By going into debt, knowing that payment is impossible.

7. By usury.

8. By graft.

9. By lying advertisements.

10. By making assignments to escape payment of debts.

11. By strong nations oppressing the weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16).

The sin aimed at by this command is a most deadly one—that of lying. This commandment may be broken:

1. By actual open lying.

2. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God.

3. By slander.

4. By tale-bearing (Lev. 19:16).

This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness.

5. By creating a false impression (Ex. 23:1).

6. By a breach of promise.

7. By withholding the truth.

8. By exaggeration.

9. By flattery.

10. By recommending a man for a position of honor and trust who is unfitted for it.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things, but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another. It is not wrong to have lands and personal property which one may have acquired honestly, but it is wrong to have the lands which belong to another. It is right to have a wife, but it is wrong to have another's wife. This commandment goes back of all the rest. It deals not only with the open violation, but with the inner desires and motives. It strikes at the very purposes of the heart.

Nowhere Else to Go

I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that of all about me seemed insufficient for that day—Abraham Lincoln.

Cure for Depression

The best cure for depression is to look around and see what is happening to other people. You are not hearing all the misfortunes of the world.

DENMARK

Wallace Berry Dead—$100 Cleared from Fair—Farm Bureau Entertained.

Wallace Berry passed away at his home August 18th, after an illness of several months. He was 74 years old. He was born in Denmark and had spent the greater part of his life at his home at Perley's Mills. A few years ago he built a very attractive bungalow at the village, where he spent his last years. He was always ready to help those in need and was interested in all things that were beneficial to the town. His work was his pleasure. It is with sadness we see these old inhabitants pass out, though we have remembered from childhood. The funeral was held from his home, Friday afternoon, at 2:30, conducted by Rev. W. A. Richmond of Bridgton. The flowers were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which he was held. Besides the widow, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Nettie Garry, of Harrison, and two grandsons to mourn their loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whyoff of Springfield, Mass., recently visited the latter's grandfather and aunt, Jared Berry and daughter.
